

NIGHT CLOSING SALOON ORDER FORECAST NOW

Hatch's Proposed 7 o'Clock Deadline for Bars Not Wise, Says Bonner

WOULDN'T HURT 'TIGERS' Higher Prices Added to Drinkers' Troubles

There is a persistent report that the Federal authorities are considering a plan to close all saloons at 7 o'clock at night.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles B. Hatch, who is directing the fight against the sale of drink to the men, said he could not comment on this.

He indicated he was much dissatisfied with the recommendations for curbing the drink evils made by the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association.

On hearing of the report that an order would be issued closing all saloons at seven o'clock, Neil Bonner, president of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, said he thought such a plan unwise.

"If a bootlegger wanted to do business with men in uniform," said Bonner, "he could purchase a supply of liquor before seven o'clock and operate all the night."

Automatically Stops Bootlegging Bonner said that by closing at 7 o'clock at night bootlegging would be automatically stopped.

Many saloon proprietors, it is said, are co-operating in every way to prevent men in the country's uniformed service from obtaining liquor.

Printed notices were sent to all saloonkeepers late Saturday by Acting Superintendent of Police Mills calling their attention to the Federal law prohibiting the sale of liquor to men of the armed forces.

Colonel Hatch had a conference with United States District Attorney Kane this afternoon and is said to have discussed with him the advisability of establishing a "dry" zone in Philadelphia.

What Dealers Agree to Do "The liquor interests in Philadelphia have given their assent to resolutions they have passed, which, if carried out, they believe will be instrumental in greatly stopping bootleggers and speakeasies."

FOE "TRIES OUT" LINES OF ALLIES FOR NEW DRIVE

Bombardment Heavy From Flanders to the Somme

PRELUDES OF OFFENSIVE

Cannonading Follows Precedent of Previous Big Thrusts

By PHILIP GIBBS

Special Cable to Evening Public Ledger Copyright, 1918, by New York Times Co.

The German artillery firing has been more heavy over many sectors of the front from Flanders to the Somme, and they seem to have put down an intense barrage of the British lines at Ridge Wood, near Ypres, and also to have shelled some positions in the Lens area and on the high ground at Houthouwer, Hemricourt and other places.

There is a bill in Flanders upon which the enemy has turned his guns of late, and a building there which he desires to destroy. The bill is Mont Des Cats, which looks across to Kemmel and Baillet, and the building is a great monastery where Trappist monks lived until Kemmel fell, and German guns moved closer to them.

Albert and Locon-Nieppe are Targets of Teuton Cannon

LONDON, May 13

"All the news from the front indicates we are on the eve of great events," said the Daily News today. "Our scouts know the enemy concentrations are being their completion."

With the Americans in Picard

May 13. During the night in Picardy doors of hell seemed literally open. Screaming demons of death filled air. Pounding guns jarred the earth as if all the evil forces below endeavoring to break through.

With the setting of the sun was no rest. Wagons loaded with ammunition and supplies started for the front. Patrols crept across Man's Land. The artillery to night into a time of terror and punishment.

Amid gigantic explosions rocked as though shaken by a hand, doors flew open, windows tumbled violently, furniture quivered, the American heavy fired, and parting shells could be heard on way to the German lines. Echoes sounded like an express train striking the railway station. Such dealing trains halt at German stations only.

Two additional buildings were demolished by American Artillery. American batteries in the enemy under heavy bombardment.

Such artillery activity starts every night at dusk and continues until after midnight. There is a respite until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, when the cannon is resumed and lasts until dawn. German shells arch through the air with a swish and a whistle. The American fire is far heavier. The Americans are continuing pulse attempted German raids.

The correspondents' billet is back of the front. Apple trees in bloom everywhere. Lilies and daisies grow outside the dough dask a nightingale perched on window and started its song. But beyond the lilies and daisies and over the nightingale song thunders the song of war.
